

Lake Ouachita, Arkansas
Labor Day 2010, September 4 – 6
By Keith Weber

We Rebels were at Ouachita and George certainly left a mark for us. He cleared a 30 or 40 ft path to the west lagoon. Anyone that has been to our island knows that was no small feat with the big rocks that litter that side. Maybe next year we can get him to clear us a landing strip.

We had a nice group with 15 coming out for the event. The diving was predictable. Above the thermocline around 27 feet was laden with particulates. Under that, it was cool, but visibility was much better. Oggie and I found excellent vis at 130 ft, but it was a chilly 44 degrees. We also found an anchor at about 75 ft that Oggie marked and Doug helped recover once we had the boat in position.

All in all, I think the outing was great. I even heard Michele say she might camp on the island next year. Yes, I know, amazing isn't it?
